

PLANNED GIVING

Make hunger relief a part of your lasting legacy and nourish lives in Central Texas for generations to come.

Charitable Bequests

You have a number of options if you're considering including Central Texas Food Bank (CTFB) in your will or living trust. Whether you make a bequest of a specific dollar amount, give a designated percentage of your estate, or leave CTFB a full or partial remainder of your estate, a charitable bequest is a flexible and simple way to make hunger relief part of your legacy.

Bequests are by far the most common type of planned gift the Central Texas Food Bank receives, and have provided hundreds of thousands of meals over the years for children, families and older adults in our community. If you are considering including CTFB in your will or trust, please get in touch. If you've already added the us to your will or trust, please make sure to contact us so we know your plans – and thank you!

Beneficiary Designations

Did you know you can name Central Texas Food Bank as a beneficiary on your life insurance, retirement plan or even your donor-advised fund? Each of these types of accounts typically requires that you name a beneficiary or beneficiaries, and CTFB can be one of yours.

Beneficiary designations are quick and easy – most involve a simple form, no lawyers required. And you can review and adjust them any time you want, so they're a flexible way to give.

Other Ways to Give

There are many other ways to make an enduring impact. CTFB accepts charitable gift annuities, gifts from charitable remainder trusts and donor-advised funds, and gifts of stock and property. Please contact us to discuss these, or any other giving options you may be interested in.

Planning Your Gift Today

1. Contact us for further information or to discuss the different options for including Central Texas Food Bank in your will or estate plan.

Melinda Gonzales Boe
Director of Community Investment
512-220-2707
mgonzalesboe@centraltexasfoodbank.org

2. Seek the advice of your financial or legal advisor. A trusted legal or financial advisor can help you develop a strategy for making the charitable gifts that are the best fit for your current investment and estate plans.
3. When including CTFB in your plans, please use our legal name and federal tax ID.

Legal Name:
Central Texas Food Bank
Address:
6500 Metropolis Drive
Austin, Texas 78744
Federal Tax ID Number:
74-2217350

All donations are tax-deductible to the extent permitted by IRS regulations.