Recipe of the Month

The Central Texas Food Bank Nutrition Team has a Swiss Chard and Caramelized Onion recipe, which is a great addition to your pantry and to share with your clients. The recipe utilizes Swiss chard which is available all year in many areas of Texas. Swiss chard is a member of the beet family and it does well in both cool and warm weather. Along with the high amount of vitamins, minerals and fibers that it holds, the rainbow of color is a plus to any dish.

To store Swiss chard, rinse off the leaves and store them in the ventilated plastic bags. The leaves are used as greens, cooked or raw, just like spinach or kale. Just like asparagus, the ribs can be cooked by steaming, roasting or sautéing. Greens such as Swiss chard combine well with sautéed dishes by adding oil, salt, plenty of garlic, and even pepper flakes-making easy and delicious side dish in just minutes.

Discover the many benefits of adding more greens, such as chard, spinach or kale to your meals. They are naturally low in fat, while providing fiber and vitamins A, C, and K. In the recipe of the month, the Swiss chard caramelize along with the onions, creating an easy, savory side dish. Try it out and let us know what you think.
